Day One

Settle in for a restful stay at one of Jacksonville's boutique hotels—five of six which have undergone renovations in the past two years, turning what was old into new options for a base from which to explore. Kubli Haus, one of the newest inns in town, offers bright and understated design, providing a mix of Jacksonville's respect for history with a contemporary twist. The Orth House at Remotion Winery, originally built in the 1880s, now offers guests three suites with private decks and Magnolia Hotel offers renovated common spaces and room configurations for individuals or large groups.

After unpacking, step downtown to explore locally owned shops including Calathea Home & Gift, Carefree Buffalo,

For those inclined to wine, a stop at Anchor Valley Wine Bar and Tasting Room is a low-key kickoff to an extended weekend. Serving its own label made with locally sourced grapes, the wine bar is located in one of the many buildings downtown full of historic character with arched transom windows and a relaxed atmosphere. The modernized remodel of Wine Lounge at Jacksonville is another example of the way new energy has invigorated a long-time gathering place in the city.
